Nonviolence

A (PRACTICAL)
TOOL FOR CHANGE

3-5 July 2009

A (practical) tool for change

Nonviolence is a concept activists often talk and think about when working for peace, but what does nonviolence mean in practical terms and how can it be applied to our campaigning and our lives?

This residential weekend event is for 18 to 30 (ish) year-olds who are interested, active and/or engaged in peace and conflict issues and who want to explore nonviolence and its uses. It offers the opportunity for those new to the subject, or old-time campaigners, to learn new skills, practise applying them, and discuss nonviolence as a tool for social change. With expert speakers and skills training, the event provides an opportunity to join a community of like-minded individuals from across the UK.

the present and future of peacework in the world today

The training weekend is being held at the Guy Chester Centre, North London and is subsidised to allow as many people to attend as possible. A limited number of travel bursaries and subsidised places are available. Places are £45 if booked before 1 June 2009 (£55 after).

The weekend is run by Fellowship of Reconciliation, England (www.for.org.uk).
